SHORT METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS FOR THE WEEK.

Monday, 23.—Arrival in Washington of all the persecuted Major-Generals, Sheridan, Skelton, and Hancock. They wait upon the citizen-King President, and upon the Sino-King Secretary of War.

"SHERIDAN'S RIDE."

HOW HE DID IT.

He Gets a "Free Pass" on the Road.

Many Newspaper Scribblers, Essaying to Do the Same Thing, Ignominiously Fail.

Etc., Etc., Etc., Etc., Etc., Etc.

In response to the invitation of the city myths, Sheridan visited our city, although "a hundred miles away," and was received by the citizens in a manner as grateful as if we were in the Valley of Winchester three or four years ago.

The General, in commencing his famous ride from Washington to this city, joined the Philadelphia myths, who had previously paid their bills, at the porch of Willard's Hotel.

Hurrying on through the City of Magnificent Distances in true warlike style, in private carriages, paying no attention whatever to the corner apple stands, they arrived fresh and in good condition at the railroad depot, where they took the first fast train for Philadelphia.

Here our myths were greatly annoyed by finding a deputation of the Baltimore myths, who wanted to share some of the honors of the ride, and who also had their pockets full of greenbacks, furnished them by their city government.

During the entire trip General Sheridan entered freely into conversation with all who desired to converse with him. When the conductor came to punch his ticket, he gave it up as readily as any other man, and on viewing the hole he remarked that "that ticket was something like Mr. Johnson, used up by punching."

At this the Baltimore myths laughed most immoderately, and pressed the General more than ever to stay over night with them.

In conversation with the Philadelphia myths, he asked if their Mayor had got home yet from the sea shore? On being told that he had, he seemed easy.

Upon arriving at Baltimore the train was besieged by several thousands of excited men, at the sight of whom the General drew his pistols, evidently doubting the nature of the demonstration.

The Baltimore myths told him he had nothing to fear, that the city was loyal, and these were shouts of welcome. The Cavalry General put up his "Colts," when the crowd rushed into the cars, through doors and windows, and down the ventilator holes, to see the great man who had once sent their friends "whirling" through the Valley of the Shenandoah.

place; but Mayor Chapman said a Jackson team would excite more attention than was necessary for the reputation of the city, and that they had better let the horses remain in. This advice was happily followed, to the great comfort of the General and the horses.

At Perryville, another flourishing city, that lives mainly on the business furnished by the accidents to ships and rafts passing the bridge, the car containing General Sheridan was switched off—the only time, the General said, he remembered of being switched off his track (great cheering from the myths), though he had done a little of it himself to others—and a special train was provided for the party, which was now joined by the Wilmington Councils and Mayor Valentine of that city.

The General, on being introduced to the new deputation, asked them if they were not a little premature with their Valentine? Upon this joke being got off the committee pressed him hard to stay with them some time, as things were very dull at the present time in that city, and more so, since Dupont's powder mills were not working to their full capacity.

The General said that he understood that they depended mainly upon the explosions at these mills to make things lively in their town; but he expected soon to see the time when the whole country would be like a powder mill, with explosions and reports that would not end only in smoke.

With these encouraging words the Wilmington chickens seemed more satisfied. Arriving at Wilmington, the ovation was on a large scale. It was one formerly used by the Railroad Company for weighing their freight cars upon, and was capable of holding several tons, but was now out of order.

Upon this scale the deputation of citizens stood and extended their hands to the gallant Sheridan. A band of music played several airs, one of which ("My Maryland") was quite cool. After the train started the Union hero stood on the rear platform waving adios as long as the wavers were in sight.

At Claymont, on the boundary line, the representatives of the Delaware "hundreds" left our hero, delivering him over to the State of Pennsylvania and her officials. Mr. Daniel P. Ray, of Philadelphia, began to shine in this style, addressing General Sheridan as follows:—

"General—I welcome you to the land of Penn, that Apostle of Peace of whom the poet has said, 'The Penn,' alluding to our Billy, 'is mightier than the sword; and though you are a soldier, we are a patriotic people, and can appreciate a great soldier. We welcome you, sir, hoping you may be pleased with us. Where is your horse?"

General Sheridan replied:—"I thank you kindly; in the corral at Giesboro."

The moment it was announced that Major-General Philip Sheridan intended to visit our city, every shopkeeper polished up the glass in his show windows to catch the eye of the country customer, and every place of amusement prepared an advertisement for publication, announcing that the General would be at their houses that night.

On the arrival of the train at Broad and Prime, the General and party were introduced to Mayor McMichael and the Presidents of the Select and Common myths, giving him the freedom of the city.

The buzzes of the multitude at this time were deafening; so much so, that the locomotive signal to draw up into the depot was not heeded, and all on top of the moving car were scraped by the roof on to the heads of the crowd on the ground.

On the General reaching the street in front of the depot in his chaise, an attempt was made by the crowd to take the horses out of the harness, and hitch up themselves in their

As the Keystone Battery were firing away with their cannon, the Mayor waved his baton, ordering his well-fed police to stand while he stepped forward and read the following piece, which we afterwards learned was the Mayor's own composition when he was a compositor.

SHERIDAN'S RIDE. BY A. SPESBUD TRAIN. As he lay in his bed at break of day, A waiter came ponding in great dismay, And frightened the Chief, did this early morn, Who kept up with his pounding more and more, With a terrible thumping and rattle and rattle, shouting, 'Some gentlemen are here at the door, Who lib more den a hundred miles away.'

Wide opened his eyes the man of war, And said, 'show the gentlemen down to the bar, And then again I need be rolled, With feelings of anger quite uncontrolled, Swearing for being called out of bed in the cold; For he thought of the sleep he'd have that day; And wished the "Committee" miles away.

Well, the first thing the General saw were the groups Of policemen, bootblacks, firemen, and troops, Which told him at once, as did our Councilmen both, That he had arrived at the end, when, with an oath, He dashed out of the cars, 'mid a storm of buzzes From the crowd in the street; when from this cause And the sight of the Mayor, called for a pause.

While their dry, dusty throats were trying to say— 'We've brought you up Sheridan, all the way From Washington here in a single day "Hurrah, hurrah for Sheridan! Hurrah for us and for our man! And when his statue is placed on high, Ours will be his point to the sky. Evans, Henssey, and Palmer, in the Temple of Fame, There with the glorious General's name Will stand out in letters both bold and bright— 'These are the men that spent a day In bringing Sheridan on as a sight From Washington—over a hundred miles away!"

Rebels routed in the field, and traitors beaten at the Ballot-Box—marshalled by deserters from our ranks, backed by the patronage and guided by the craft of a PERFDIOUS PRESIDENT, Threaten new dangers to our country. Liberty, Union, and Self-government are still menaced. The Holy Cause, victorious on so many battle-fields, sustained so often at the Polls and by Congress, is NOT YET SECURED!

OUR OWN APATHY! Shall this be? Will patriots supinely suffer the fruits of victory to pass into the hands of REBELS AND TRAITORS!

Remember that the arch-traitor and demagogue, ANDREW JOHNSON, IS STILL PRESIDENT. Remember his unmatched baseness, his flagitious designs, his cunning wiles, his despotic will; above all, remember his cabal of wicked advisers and the tremendous power in his hands.

Remember that he and they will continue the slightest falling off of our majorities in any election as evidence of sympathy with them, and a pretext for defiant and armed hostility to Congress. The INFATUATED DICTATOR will plunge us in ANOTHER CIVIL WAR!

Unless the people awe him into obedience by the significance of vast majorities. Behind the issues of who shall be Judge, who Sheriff, and who shall fill the other offices, is the great question, "How best shall the Usurper be Rebuked and Dismayed?" Philadelphia glories in the renown of being the most loyal and devoted of all the cities. Her potential voice, spoken at the polls, has for seven years past electrified the nation.

Thrilled armies in the field, cheered Congress in its labors. Let it be heard again in October in thunder-tones as of yore, reanimating the loyal and confounding the traitorous.
